What is recognized as valid proof of COVID-19 vaccination?

Employers, businesses, or events may request proof of vaccination. Here are examples of what are considered verified proof of COVID-19 vaccination in Washington state:

CDC COVID-19 Vaccination Record Card

- This is the most common form of proof you are likely to come across.
- CDC Vax Cards typically include entries hand-written by a medical provider and are printed on double-sided, rigid stock paper.
- Originals, copies or photographs on a mobile device are acceptable.
- Full vaccination is recognized two weeks after last recorded dose:
 - Single dose for Johnson & Johnson (Janssen) vaccine.
 - Two doses of Pfizer-BioNTech/Comirnaty or Moderna vaccine.

WA State Certificate of COVID-19 Vaccination

- Acceptable in digital or print format from MyIRmobile.com.
- Sample A (Note: no longer issued as of 07/21) must have "Vaccination Series Complete" box checked to be valid.
- Sample B (currently available) will indicate series "Complete" (left image) or "Not Complete" (right image).

WA State Immunization Information System printout

- Certificate of Immunization Status (CIS) forms printed from the Washington State Immunization Information System are medically verified.
- Hand-written entries are not considered valid unless signed by a licensed medical provider.

What else counts as an official record of COVID-19 vaccination?

Some examples of official vaccination records less likely to be used at places of business include:

- Lifetime immunization record booklet
- Verified electronic medical record printout from a medical provider
